

US construction. A clearer starting point.

A proposed coordination service for UK recruitment agencies exploring US construction placements.

AmChex is a worked example from Know Everything, Do Anything. It shows how a focused service could help agencies assess a project and coordinate the specialist work needed before a placement.

01 A project worth assessing

Define the actual worksite, duties, dates and workforce requirements before making a commitment.

02 Specialists with a clear remit

Identify the employment partner, immigration counsel and site responsibilities for that exact project.

03 An evidence-backed next step

Track costs, outstanding decisions and the conditions that must be satisfied before mobilisation.

The proposed coordination model

One UK-facing coordination point, with responsibilities agreed across the delivery team.

UK recruitment agency

Owens recruitment and its client relationship.

AmChex coordination

Organises the brief, tracks evidence and keeps decisions visible.

US specialist partners

Assess and accept defined employment, immigration and payroll duties.

US site host

Directs the work and fulfils its site and worker-safety responsibilities.

Before a real launch

The actual worker route, partner coverage, contracts, insurance and funding must receive specialist review. No supplier is approved by this example, and no visa outcome, placement date or service price is promised.
